SOLDIER'S RETURN.

Gunner Herb. A. Hodgins Given an Enthusiastic Reception Last Night.

PRESENTED WITH AN ADDRESS

AND A WELL-FILLED CUP—A BIG CROWD FULL OF ALL KINDS OF NOISE.

"A soldier firm and sound of heart," "A gentleman in khaki"—it matters not whether he is personally known to us or not—is sure of a welcome and a spontaneous outburst of enthusiasm wherever he goes just now, and, though very likely it was almost as hard to face an audience as a rain of floor ballets, Private H. A. Hodgins must have felt a thrill of pleasure at the hearty and enthusiastic welcome home accorded to him last night.

The concert given for his benefit, to a large and appreciative audience, was a good ome, consisting of course, entirely of selections of a patriotic character. The opening overture—the very popular "Soldiers of the Queen"—was capably rendered by the Citizen Band, and some of the audience actually so far forgot the traditions of Rat Portage usage (for audiences here are not prone to demonstrative enthusiasm as to join heartily in the chorus.

Mr. Barrowman sang "The Hat

That Kruger Wore" with considerable vim, and H. M. Sutherland was encouraged in his song "Marching." "When the Boys in Khaki Come Home," by Mrs. Towels, with its allusion to "Our Commandant's Son," and its plaintive air, appealed to everyone; but the point that caught the gallery was the dramatic trampling under foot of Kruger's flag, and the waving of our own instead, in Mrs. Ferguson's song "Hurrah for the Boys in Khaki," and the allusion in the song to Hodgins and Machin who "fought the Boers at Paardeburg."

Early in the programme Mr. Langford made a short but telling little speech. He stated that he was unexpectedly filling the place Mr. Boyce was to have occupied, he (Mr. Boyce) being unable to appear. Mr. Langford regretted this, feeling that, as "the man of the hour," all would have been glad to hear Mr. Boyce, alluded to the recent political night, and the capital showing he had made against such odds, and then spoke in a few well put sentences of the great and valuable result of the war (apart from the overturning of the South African oligarchy, with all its attendant evils), to the British empire, in the unification of all its colonies and possessions, and claimed that, sad and numerous as of necessity had been the individual tragedies of loss and sacrifice, they were all "worth while" in drawing together the scattered children of the Queen.

Rev. Mr. Rochester in lieu of D. C. Cameron, who was prevented by absence from town from taking the chair, made a short address at the opening of the entertainment, and at the end of the first half of the programme introduced the hero of the evening, Private Hodgins, amidst the most enthusiastic cheering and waving of handkerchiefs throughout the entire house.

Among all there none were more enthusiastic than the smart little fellows of the Boys' Brigade, though even their interest did not exceed that of one little lad of six summers in the audience, who heroically waited with patience all the "singing and things," but stood up the whole time with his handkerchief in his hand, waiting to wave it when the really truly soldier should appear. Mr. Rochester read an address to Private Hodgins from the citizens of Rat Portage, and on their behalf presented him with a purse, in response to which Mr. Hodgins thanked his friends very gracefully, and then, in a very modest but lively and interesting manner, gave some account of the happenings to himself in this last eventful year, or almost a year since he left here to join the Strathcona's, alluding at the end of his speech to several old Rat Portage boys whom he had met at the front, among them being Harold Machin.

It makes the newspaper reports seem more real when we hear the details from the lips of those who have actually been making history. As Private Hodgins stood there telling his simple unvarnished story in that picturesque khaki uniform, we had a feeling that there was a man who had in this one year learnt and grasped more of life—and death—than most of us are likely to learn in a whole life time, and that if ever at the back of his mind there must be a wonderful array of thoughts and memories and pictures that, with all the good within the world, he could never really show to the circumscribed vision of the uninitiated dwellers in lands of peace, and, as we listened to him we remembered that that a simple "private" is just one of thousands, a unit out of a huge aggregate, every single man has done his part in fighting for his Queen and country; every man has had his share in the overthrow of what we truly believe to have been an evil; and every man, though he knows he has in this done nothing but his simple duty, is deserving of the honor and affection that all unite in giving to the "Soldiers of the Queen."

G. A. KOBOLD LEAVES

He was Presented with a Gold Headed Cane Last Night

BY THE OLD TIMERS' ASSOCIATION

A VERY INTERESTING EVENT WHICH OCCURRED IN THE HILLIARD HOUSE PARLORS.

The decision of Mr. G. A. Kobold to leave town has caused universal regret. Although a comparatively young man, he was one of the oldest residents of Rat Portage and was looked upon as one of the standbys of the town. However, a very tempting business chance has lured him to Winnipeg, where he goes to take charge of the business of his father. He has disposed of his butchering business here to John Gardner & Co., who will continue to dispense the same reliable article that Mr. Kobold handled.

The Old Timers' Association, composed largely of our solidest business men and others of like character, invited Mr. Kobold last night to the Hilliard house parlor and there presented him with a gold headed cane and a very suitable address. Mr. Barnes, the vice-president of the association, made the presentation and Mr. J. W. Humble read the address. Mr. Kobold in reply made a neat speech thanking the members for their kind thoughtfulness and assuring them that he would prize the gift more knowing that it came from the old timers—men who had known him for many years. He felt many regrets at leaving Rat Portage. From a sentimental standpoint he would much rather remain here, but he could not refuse a tempting business offer.

Mayor McCarthy and Messrs. Humble, Horwill, Chadwick, McLeod, Rice, Hennessy and Gardner made a few complimentary remarks, the latter gentleman particularly referring to the many good qualities of Mr. Kobold and saying that it is a creditable thing to see him taking over his father's business. Jack Hennessy head office at Buffalo. Mr. Simpson's report was so satisfactory that the shareholders unanimously voted him all the money required to push the work and the Big Master will soon be heard from as a large dividend payer. Other mines working in this district which will be benefited by the railroad are the Sairey Camp, (which has already considerable machinery) The Bostoian mine, the Tower, Neepawa, the Jubilee, the Bee Hive, S. R. 234, the Swede Boys, Haycocks, Paul Gasser, and a number of others upon which considerable work has been done. It is the intention of the purchasers of the Watson mine property to mill in Keewatin and at the present time there are a great many carloads shipped each week, as the capacity of the mine is largely in excess of the milling power of the ten stamp mill now upon the property.

Mr. Munro says he fully anticipates a very large influx of American capital into this district in the spring as nearly all properties being worked are proving a success, and the work is being largely done by American capital, and the results are much better known in American cities than in Winnipeg.

While it is very satisfactory to know that foreign capital is coming in, it is a greater satisfaction to know that the two first great successes were made by Winnipeg citizens, (the Sultana and the Watson-Munro) more by their push and enterprise than by the amount of capital at their disposal. —Winnipeg Free Press.

Rat Portage Curling Club

An enthusiastic meeting of the Rat Portage Curling Club was held Tuesday evening at their club rooms. Fifteen new members were proposed and accepted, and it looks as if the present curling season will be one of the best in the history of the club.

The following skips were appointed Messrs Horn, Drewry, Schnarr, Kyle, Wier, Burton, Hudson, Beaudro, Gaudaur, Neads, Robertson, Cameron, Campbell, Smith and Edmison.

WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN

Retrospect By Former British Premier Opens Up Avenues for Thought.

Glasgow, Nov. 10.—The Earl of Roseberry was installed as lord rector of Glasgow university today. His rectorial address, on the subject of "The British Empire" was a stirring appeal to the race to realize its responsibilities and to prepare to fight for its existence.

Lord Roseberry asserted that but for the small incident of the acceptance of a peerage the empire might have been incalculably greater. Had the elder Pitt, when he became first minister, not left the house of commons he would probably have retained his sanity and authority and he would have prevented or suppressed the riotous budget of Townsend, induced George III, to listen to reason, introduced representatives of America into parliament and preserved the thirteen colonies to the British crown.

"Is it fanciful to dwell for a moment on what might have happened?" continued Lord Roseberry. "The reform bill of 1832 would probably have been passed months earlier, for the new blood of America would have burst the old vessels of the constitution. It would have provided a self adjusting system of representation, such as now prevails in the United States, whereby the increasing population is proportionately represented. And at last when the Americans became a majority in the seats, the empire would perhaps have been moved solemnly across the Atlantic and Britain would have become a historical shrine.

The European outpour of the world empire. What an extraordinary revolution it would have been. The greatest known, without bloodshed, the most sublime transference of power in the history of mankind. Our conceptions can scarcely picture the progression across the Atlantic of the greatest sovereign and the greatest fleet in the universe.

FIREMAN MULLIN KILLED.

Crown Sheet of Boiler Bursts at Eagle River and He is Scalded to Death.

Jerry Mullin, one of the most popular C.P.R. firemen in town met with a most distressing death at Eagle river Friday night last. He was standing in front of the fire box door when the crown plate of the boiler blew out, scalding and burning him so that he only lived three hours. Deceased was a single man about 25 years of age and a native of Ireland. He had been a resident of Rat Portage for about two years and was popular with all who knew him. Engineer Martin also received some slight injuries.

High School Literary Society.

The High School Literary Society held its second debate this season in the school, on Friday afternoon last. The President being absent, the vice pres. occupied the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. The programme then followed. Miss Walker gave a very interesting reading, entitled, "Which does the most harm—fire or water?" Miss Baker read an excellent essay on Literature. The debate, "Resolved, that Wellington was a greater general than Napoleon," created much excitement. There were three speakers on each side and the debate was keenly contested. Affirmative, W. Chapple, A. Nicholson, Gerlie McMurdie. Negative, R. Beaudro, G. Campbell, Edna Griffith.

Miss Moore acted as critic, and very ably performed her duties. The judges decided in favor of the Affirmative.

With the Mining Public

A gang of men left here on Thursday last and proceeded to the end of the Ontario & Rainy River railway track. They took in a large amount of supplies and a complete camping outfit. These men will immediately begin cutting out and making the road from the railway to the Round Lake copper mines, the property of Mr. Hammond. We understand that the Montana expert, Mr. Gunn, who examined the property recently was most favorably impressed and so expressed himself—Port Arthur Chronicle.

William Clauss of the John Sykes Mining Co., while going from their mine to Dinorwic on Thursday, broke through the ice and was drowned. The body was recovered next day.

rather mean here, but he could not refuse a tempting business offer.

Mayor McCarthy and Messrs. Humble, Horswill, Chadwick, McLeod, Rice, Hennessey and Gardner made a few complimentary remarks, the latter gentleman particularly referring to the many good qualities of Mr. Kobold and saying that it is a creditable thing to see him taking over his father's business. Jake Hennessey said that he arrived in Rat Portage in 1879 and had not Mr. Kobold arrived the following year to supply good meats he would not have remained. After a couple of songs the company dispersed, wishing Mr. Kobold all manner of success in the Prairie City.

A Successful Gold Mine

The purchase by the Ottawa Gold Milling and Mining company of the Golden Whale or what has been better known for the past three years as the Watson-Munro mine in the New Klondyke district of Northwestern Ontario, is the second largest sale yet made in our Central Canada gold fields; the Sultana still taking the precedence for large figures. Mr. J.M. Munro, formerly a Winnipeg citizen, but who has spent the last three years associated with Senator Watson developing the property which they have now sold, is in the city on his way with his family to the eastern and southern states, where they will spend the winter. Mr. Munro feels that he is entitled to a rest after three years steady hard work. A Free Press reporter calling upon Mr. Munro was kindly given a description of their valuable mine and the district. The mine is situated eight miles south of Dymont station on the Canadian Pacific railway. The C.P.R., realizing the value of the New Klondyke district this summer built a branch line from Dymont to the Watson-Munro property. This line is the commencement of a railway which in the near future will run through the Manitou district, the Mosher Bay district and through to Mine Centre. This route will give railway communication direct to a number of mines now being worked.

The Glass Reef, which has already gone below the two hundred foot level and has hundreds of feet of drifting and cross cutting, started their ten stamp mill a few weeks ago, which has since been running steadily night and day. This is one of the best equipped mines in Canada. The Big Master mine will also be on this new line of railway. The mine has over forty men employed and will soon have their machinery, which is now upon the ground in working order. Mr. Simpson, the manager, has just returned from attending the annual meeting of this company, which was held at the

$30,000 IN TAXES PAID

Many Citizens Take Advantage of the Five Per Cent. Discount.

Tax Collector Rose reports that up to the 15th of November—the last day allowing 5 per cent. discount—$30,000 in taxes had been collected. Fifteen hundred dollars were allowed as rebate to the enterprising citizens who put up their cash before the 15th.

Taxpayers who have not already paid will be allowed 3 per cent. off before and up to November 30. After that date there will be no rebate, and, after December 14, 5 per cent. interest will be added. A number of people have paid since the 15th and it is quite likely nearly all the taxes will be paid before the end of the month.

A Magnificent Reception.

The publishers of the Family Herald and Weekly Star, of Montreal, may justly feel proud of the magnificent reception their new premium pictures, "Christ in the Temple," and "Home From the War," have received.

They deserve it, too, for the pictures are most certainly beautiful. Either one of them alone would be considered a splendid premium, but when one knows that each subscriber receives both pictures, he can easily understand the demand for that favorite paper this season.

Clergy of all denominations are publicly requesting their church members to secure a copy of the picture, "Christ in the Temple."

the most sublime intercourse of power in the history of mankind. Our conceptions can scarcely picture the procession across the Atlantic of the greatest sovereign and the greatest fleet in the universe.

Ministers, officials and parliament departing solemnly for another hemisphere. Not, as in the case of the Portuguese sovereigns emigrating to Brazil under the spur of necessity, but under the vigorous embrace of the new world, America would have hung on to the skirts of Britain and pulled her back out of European complications.

She would have profoundly affected her foreign policy in the direction of peace and her influence on her domestic policy would have been scarcely less potent—probably would have appeased and even contented Ireland. The ancient constitution of Britain would have been rendered more comprehensive and more elastic.

On the other hand the American yearning for liberty would have taken a different form, would have blended with other traditions and flowed into other moulds. Above all, there would have been no separation, no war of independence, no war of 1812 with all the bitter memories they have left in America. To secure that priceless boon, I could be satisfied to see the British federal parliament sitting in Columbia today.

Do you Fear Heart Failure?

No death comes so suddenly and unexpectedly as that caused by heart failure, but the trouble had its beginning months or perhaps years before when the blood became thin and watery and the nerves exhausted. Gradually the waste has become more rapid than the process of repair, the tissues of the heart have become diseased and finally some over-excitation or nervous shock has caused the beating to cease and life to depart. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food prevents heart failure and all similar diseases by creating new rich blood and nerve force, and building up the system.

John F. Howard, of Winnipeg, Writes Intelligently of the District.

GIVES OPINIONS OF PROMINENT MEN

CLAIMS MADE THAT THE DISTRICT POSSESSES SUPERIOR ADVANTAGES TO ANY OTHER.

John F. Howard, of Winnipeg, has given us permission to publish an article on Gold Mining in this district which will appear this month in several of the leading journals of the United States.

"We might say that a great deal of interest has been created during the past summer in the gold fields of the Lake of the Woods through articles written by Mr. Howard for many leading financial and other journals.

The prospects in the wonderfully rich districts of the Lake of the Woods and the Manitou have never been so bright and the permanency of the gold mining industry so well established as at the present time. This has not been accomplished by blowing of trumpets nor by the discovery of myriads of bonanzas that have been reported from week to week, each one greater in value than the other, and the veins, wider, larger, and richer than the one recorded the week before. It has been brought about by the persistent and businesslike procedure of the companies who conduct mining as a commercial enterprise and not as a gamble or speculation requiring the fulfillment of certain conditions as requisite to success. These companies have opened up properties upon which the general scientific and commercial conditions for a profitable enterprise exist.

They succeeded by the permanent continuance of scientific work aided by the expenditure of money (which is necessary in any business) and having placed their values in such a position that they are now yielding handsome and unexpected profits and the permanency of the properties is now well established.

There is one unusual and commendable feature in the conduct of mining operations in this remarkable district. Of the companies doing business few are offering their stock for sale on the open market. The shares of the Mikado, Sultan, Anglo-Canadian, and others for instance are held at a price and grades of ore seems to have been established beyond any reasonable doubt, in fact the ore in the lower workings seems to be wider than that at the outcroppings."

Alan Sullivan, C. E., M. E., manager of the Anglo-Canadian Gold Estates, Limited, says "wherever you go in any part of this wonderful district there are outcroppings reefs varying from one to four hundred feet, fifty per cent of these reefs carry gold in appreciable quantities." This high per centage is no exaggeration, and I venture to say is unparalleled in any other part of the globe. What is the cause of this wonderful wealth? There has been a great deal of volcanic disturbance throughout the district to which fact I attribute its amiferous quality. All along and near the edge of the contact bounding the eruptive points, gold is found, sometimes in reefs of outcropping quartz, sometimes in dykes or bands of schistose rock through which the solutions carrying gold have percolated with extraordinary uniformity. In an embryo of this nature a very small amount of development work is necessary, as a result of wearing down by glacial action the present surface of the country is from six hundred to eight hundred feet at least below the original surface. This means in other words that nature has done this amount of prospecting for us, and at five hundred feet below the present surface I have seen reefs which amply justify my assertion that they do most certainly carry down to an indefinite depth."

A. H. Prescott, mining engineer and practical mining expert, tells of his investigations in the Lake of the Woods gold district. He says "I have visited the mines in Alaska, Montana, and California that are paying large dividends on ore that averages less than two dollars and they will continue doing so for years to come, but I could not truly compare them with Ontario properties. I investigated rock samples from twelve going concerns and over twenty prospects, and it is one of the finest collections I have ever seen." Among them were some forty samples taken from trench ninety feet across, a reef over four hundred feet wide and which can be traced for over a mile. The samples gave an average of over ten dollars to the ton in gold. I tested samples taken from the bottom of a pit twenty-five feet deep on the same reef which assayed seven dollars per ton. If that pit were to go down one hundred feet, and I see no reason why it should not go one thousand, it would certainly average one of four dollars. With a mill of four hundred stamps it would pay at least twenty per cent dividends upon a paid up capital of four hundred thousand dollars."

material, cheap power, large water facilities available for power, facilities for distribution by land and water, and safety for life and property. Gold mining here has practically no limit. The free-drilling ones of northern and northwestern Ontario offer better rewards to the miners and capitalists than any ages in the world, and their extent and continuity admit of no doubt. A small pocket or placer tract may soon be worked out, but a quartz vein of moderate extent will offer abundance of material for a business man's life-time."

Nature has done much for mining in the Lake of the Woods. The veins are in a great many instances clearly defined and traceable for long distances, so that when mining operations are begun the first shot will run up one that may be put through a mill. The climatic conditions are of great advantage here. The lake affords the best possible facilities for transportation to be found in America. If it were not for the endless chains of lakes it would be hard indeed to get about from place to place in the country, though not mountainous, is a very hilly. These endless chains of lakes passing from a height of land to the water and out water produce many large lakes that can be used in creating power either to be used directly or by generating electricity.

Thomas W. Gibson, Secretary to the Ontario Geological Survey of Mines, says "The prospects of northern and northwestern Ontario will not be reckoned among the most valuable property in the world by reason of the vast number of waterfalls situated there. The main waterfalls dividing the waters of the Great Lakes from that of the Hudson's Bay runs in a north-west direction from the eastern boundary of the province of Ontario north to the head of Lake St. Joseph on the northern boundary, a distance of about five hundred miles. It consists of a low land or plateau rather than a sharp defined ridge and is estimated as having an average width of about seventy miles in an area of about thirty-five thousand square miles. able feature in the conduct of mining operations in this remarkable district. Of the companies doing business here are offering their stock for sale on the open market. The shares of the Mikado, Sultana, Anglo-Canadian and others for instance are held at a premium in London and few outside people have the privilege of owning any of the valuable stock.

Chester H. Smith, a man whose word has weight with large investors, visited and carefully investigated the money-making possibilities of the district. He says "the opportunities for making money in this country are far ahead of anything I ever witnessed."

Ronald Stewart, another gentleman who has investigated in the interests of large capital, says "to tell the whole truth about what I saw would in all probability condemn the country. Its phenomenal richness together with the safety of carrying on mining operations is absolutely beyond the comprehension of the average mind."

"Nature did a great work when she squandered off all the softer materials, including the earth, and laid bare the mammoth veins for miles, so that man can easily trace them and locate the richest portions of these magnificent deposits. I expect to see the day when Western Ontario, just over the line a little north of St. Paul will be recognized as the greatest gold-bearing ever discovered."

Prof. A. P. Coleman, geologist and mineralogist of the Ontario Department of Mines, in his report to the government, says "looking at our gold-bearing region, one is struck with the wide extent over which gold has been found. The variety of the deposits which occur in the ease with which they may be reached, the free-milling character of the ore, all points to a favor when compared with most gold fields. Nor part of the region is more than a few miles from a railroad and most of the mines are within a few miles of the railway, all parts being readily reached by boat. The region is not an inaccessible desert, nor covered with malaria swamps. Not cut off from civilization by precipitous mountains. Supplies of all kinds are cheap and easily obtained. Efficient labor can be obtained on easy terms and life and property are as safe as anywhere on the globe."

Charles Kretschman, M. E., University of Freiberg, Germany, reports "rarely have abundant veins or deposits been discovered so favorably situated for economical exploration equal to those in the Lake of the Woods and Manitou districts. As a result of recent developments their permanency and depth, size of reefs would certainly average one of four dollars. With a mill of four hundred stamps it would pay at least twenty percent dividends upon a paid up capital of four hundred thousand dollars."

Dwight E. Woodbridge, the eminent American geologist, recently said "there is no country in the world so thoroughly impregnated with gold veins as is the Western Ontario district. The peculiar feature of the district is that all the gold veins have been explored by glacial action. The glaciers have scraped the country completely and left the veins where they can easily be traced by the prospector. The ore is free-milling and very rich."

T. R. Dawson, C. E., O.L.S., Canadian director for the great Mikado mine, says "that gold is here widely distributed in paying quantities and in many localities in exceedingly rich deposits, no man who has traversed over the district and made even a superficial examination, will for a moment doubt. I confidently believe that it is a conservative statement to make that this region will prove to be one of the greatest gold producing areas on the planet."

"This vast area is the most part covered with virgin forests of Jack-pine, Spruce, Tamarac, Poplar, Birch, and Cedar, so that abundance of timber is at all times available for mining operations and whenever it becomes necessary to use steam power in the operation of the development of any mine the question of fuel is not a formidable one, as fuel can be obtained here probably in greater abundance or at less cost than in any other gold-bearing region in the world. These forests are also well stocked with Caribou, Moose, Partridge and Duck and in every stream part like Swain fish of the finest varieties. No prospector need fear hunger or cold."

A vast number of mining experts for both eastern and foreign capitals, have been in the Lake of the Woods district for the first time this year, attracted by reports of development and important sales of property recently in London. Their reports were all favorable, many of very large additions to our "I am" and opening to any one new."

Arthur Blair, Director of the Ontario Mines for the Dominion government, in a recent report says "the opportunities for the profitable investment of capital in the Lake of the Woods and Manitou districts are numerous and the vivifying touch of enterprise and capital alone is wanted to call many other industries into being. There is an abundance of raw boundary, a distance of about four hundred miles. It consists of a tableland or plateau rather than a sharply defined ridge and is estimated as having an average width of about seventy miles or an area of about thirty-five thousand square miles. Thus with the slopes on both sides affording an extensive catchment surface for the streams running to the north and south. Its elevation will average fifteen hundred feet above the level of the sea or nine hundred feet above lakes Superior and Huron. The consequence is that the rivers and streams which flow from it into the Great Lakes, though mostly of considerable volume, are not of great length and their descent is therefore unusually rapid and abrupt and marked in many places by cascades and falls. The character of the country in Western Ontario is such as to provide an almost unlimited water power easily available. Taking into account the annual precipitation of moisture in the form of rainfall and snow there is no reason to doubt that millions of horsepower could be generated from these streams with a minimum of trouble and expense."

The advantages of the country have formerly almost been a drawback, for it seems that only places that are difficult of access and require a heavy expense to recover their value would favor in the eyes of mining men. It is established beyond question by the results already obtained here that the Lake of the Woods and Manitou gold fields are richer than any and from now on the gold output will rapidly

We Called it Low Grade BUT HOW'S THIS?

THOS. F. BURBECK, the contractor who is sinking our shaft, has just visited St. Paul. He brought down some ore from great property which we have had assayed, giving the following results:

LABORATORY OF
CHARLES W. DREW, Ph. B., A. D.
Analytical and Consulting Chemist and Assayer, Professor of Chemistry and Toxicology, Medical Department, of Hamline University, Director of Minnesota Institute of Pharmacy. Formerly Chemist to State of Minnesota. Chemist Society of Minneapolis, Minn.
Office and Laboratory: Rooms 504-506 Century Building, 100 Avenue South and Fourth St.
MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 18, 1900.

I hereby certify that the Samples of Ore, herein described, assayed for the Homestake Gold Mining Company of Ontario, Limbong, of the following results:

No.	Gold No. of ounces per ton	Value at $20.00 per oz.	Silver No. of ounces per ton	Value at $1.00 per oz.	Total Value at $21.00 per oz. and Silver
1	1	$ 20.00	1.0	0.60	$ 20.60
2	6	12.00	None	0.00	12.00
3	1	2.00	8	8.00	10.00

CARL E. VAN CLEVE, Assayer.

It is absolutely impossible to comprehend the great value of this property. There is no doubt, now, but that we have some very rich ore, in fact, very much richer than we ever anticipated.

People doubted our statement regarding the size of our deposit, and really it is no wonder. Think of a vein from 100 to 500 feet wide, nearly a mile long, that carries such values above mentioned per ton in free-milling gold.

We have a few thousand shares of the fifteen-cent issue of which we are selling upon the following terms: Three cents per share cash with order, and two cents per share per month until paid, 75 per cent. off if all cash is sent with the order.

We think of it the truest we shall find it to be, that we no longer have time to knit together those bonds of true friendship and affection which bound our predecessors together and made life sweet to them.

We are always in a hurry, rushing here and there. We meet and know many people in crowds and yet never have time to understand them, to give them or gain from them sympathy. We can scarcely spare an hour that is unconnected with some form of entertainment or some business matter to those we call our closest friends.

Letter writing has been reduced to its least common denominator as time presses on us heavily, and we have no pursuits that we can share with our so-called friends that enable us to study each other's characters. Friendship, in fact, has become a mere term with the general run of people.

Sure Enough.

A busy merchant who had not taken vacation for years, in which time every other member of his family had enjoyed an annual outing, concluded to give himself a rest of a week or two and started for the mountains.

When about a day's journey from home, he received a telegram from his wife to this effect:

My father has been entirely destroyed by the loss of his money and I am now a beggar.

He had been a very successful man, but he had lost his money.

Many a man is the cause of ruin to his family by the loss of his money.

He had been a very successful man, but he had lost his money.

The Lie Eternal.

A girl came in her nightgown to her mother one morning and said: "Which is the worst, mamma, to lie or to steal?" The mother said: "That doesn't concern me, my dear, but I will tell you which is worse. 'Well,' the little one, 'I've been thinking a deal about it, and I've concluded it is worse to steal. If I do a thing, you will take it back, give me a scolding, and if you're angry you can pay for it. But—and as a look of awe in the little one's face is forever."

So It Does.

I gentleman when passing a little boy selling newspapers at a street corner remarked:

"Are you not afraid you will catch such a wet night, my little boy?"

"Oh no," replied the boy, "selling newspapers keeps up the circulation."

A rich man is an honest man, no thanks to him, for he would be a double knave to cheat mankind when he has no need of it.

Foods are made out of all kinds of stuff, but the lining is always the same cheap. - Atchison Globe.

and there are some people who still believe it. As if men devoting all their energies and skill to ameliorating the ills of mankind would spread disease by distributing old and possibly germ-infected sponges. As a matter of fact, sponges are small and smooth as velvet, being close grained.

The fakirs' sponges are the clippings of the big sponges sold to livermen and others who need large sponges. The parts cut away have little body and would soon wear loose. The fakirs buy these bits, trim them into shape and then give them a bath in diluted muriatic acid. After lying there for 12 hours they are taken out and washed in clear water and dried. They are bleached, in other words, but at still further detriment to the sponge. Never of close texture, the mesh is made more rotten by the acid, and that is why they soon fall apart. But so far as disease is concerned they are as pure as any sponge brought in the finest drug store.

The Young Men of Today.

The young men of today are too flimsy—too much given to self analysis, too self pampering. Their shoes and neckties cost more each year than did the entire wardrobe of their grandfathers. They feel a sense of degradation in small beginnings and joggling, and they wait for success ready made to come to them. There is not a young man in the country who would imitate Ben Franklin and march through the streets munching a loaf of bread while looking for employment. He dare not, indeed, because society has become also flimsy, and he would be arrested as a tramp. The young man of today wants capital. He cannot be president of a bank or judge of a court the first day he is from school, and he feels, as the famous Eli Pussley, that he has "no chance."

Exhibit Lifelike Qualities.

Weeds if they are pulled out of a lawn at a time when they are full of seed will evince a degree of care for the seeds which is almost touching. They will curl their leaves upward as far as each can go to cover the seeds and protect them from the sun till the end, and often one will find weeds that are quite dead, sun killed, whose leaves still are wrapped firmly around the seed pods. No mother could show more striking devotion in death than do these despoiled plants.

A Faithful Likeness.

Artist—Here is the portrait of your wife which—

Mr. Richman—Ah! It's very like her. Artist—She—er—hm—she didn't pay for it. She said you'd do that.

Mr. Richman—Ah! Still more like her.

from her. On the fifth day a telegram was delivered at the young lawyer's office.

"Wife's body forwarded this morning."

The signature was a scrawl, but the message was enough to chill the very marrow of that young husband's bones.

It had been sent from New York. He saw, in his mind's eye, his dainty little wife running up to town for a day's shopping. He thought of the frightful debt. He knew just how it had all come about, and with a horror-stricken face he dashed out into the street and fairly ran to the house of his wife's sister to acquaint her with the frightful news. He was past speech when he reached the house, but he held out the fatal telegram. The sister read it.

"Well," said she, "it's time he sent it. She's been expecting it for six weeks. It's the one that goes with the pink chiffon skirt, I suppose."

COOLING DRINKS IN TURKEY.

Beverages and Ices Sold on All the Main Streets.

On all the main streets nearly every other shop has a counter of white marble and large bottles of iced water, lemonade, cherry sirup, pomegranate sirup or something of the sort. Green leaves surround the bottles, and a little machine keeps up a tinkling of glasses to attract the passersby. Certain shops are known for their specialties in certain sirups and others for their water, about which Turks are very particular and can tell at once from which of the many springs near the capital it comes. The streets swarm with itinerant sellers with elaborate arrangements for keeping the water cold. Some have a regular booth where they dispense anything from water to a gazelle, which is the name for effervescing lemonade.

The simplest method is that adopted by those who carry about a huge glass bottle holding about two gallons of lemonade on the mouth of which is balanced a large lump of ice, continually dripping into the bottle. These drinks are the cheapest, one farthing a tumbler. Unfortunately the coin representing a farthing is almost extinct so that the drinker has to drink two glasses or come back next day for the balance. The ice cream vendors, too, must not be forgotten. Their picturesque get up is very distinctive, and they do a roaring trade. The ices they sell are very pure, and one never hears of cases of illness among those eating them. The time when the men do their best business with Europeans is at night after dinner. Every one is then sitting outside on the terraces or balconies overlooking the Bosphorus. The ice men come along in a boat and seem at once to supply a long felt want.

more important, than the earnest interest and so operation.

So many parents allow their children to fall into idle and irregular habits, that it is almost impossible to get them to look forward, or take an active interest in anything that is for their future good. They have lived so long in the present moment that they are incapable of application in anything that does not bring present enjoyment.

Now, how shall we overcome this? Parents may do a great deal by a firm assertion of parental authority. There is too much false sentiment and parental weakness to-day which is ruining many an otherwise useful citizen. A school might be established where these boys could attend during their unoccupied time and apply themselves to the individual study of two or three subjects, relative perhaps to their present or future occupation, or their very useful training in the three R's of which they cannot have too much. The only entrance required for such a school should be a suitable age limit. The teacher should be ready to accept any one without any educational qualification whatever, and do his best for him as an individual and should earnestly try to show the subject that he is intensely interested in him, and very anxious to help him in whatever course he means to take. There is a kind of manual training which can be given with very little expense which would arouse the interest of many a boy. A judicious teacher with a firm and dignified manner could find many ways in which to enlist many an idleness boy in some good work.

Mining and Other Industries.

A glance at the enormous dividends being paid by mining companies monthly and quarterly as compared with those paid by other commercial enterprises, should convince the most pessimistic observer that mining as a business is far and away ahead of the ordinary business investment. A few facts may contribute to the stock of knowledge by the casual observer and intending investor of capital.

In California there are at present more than 100 gold mines paying dividends or profits to their owners, that we know of. There are many others, quartz and placer mines, of which no record is kept as to the output.

Stratton's Independence at Cripple Creek, Colo., is paying quarterly dividends of $188,000, and the total paid has been $2,440,000. The Calumet and Hecla copper mines of Michigan have paid $70,000,000 to the shareholders though it cost them $1,200,000 before one dividend was declared, and

Do Not Misquote Figures.

Some advertisers are using the Land Revenue Department's recent official report upon baking powders to show the comparative strength and quantities of these articles as they are sold in the Dominion. It is not fair, however, either to the Analysts or to the public in making this use of the official figures, that they should be misquoted, as it is alleged has been done in some instances.

The following figures are copied from the official report printed by the Canadian government, and show correctly, as per that document, the relative strength value of the baking powders named. The analyses in all cases were made by the Government Analysts:

	Per cent. of available leavening gas.
Royal (average of three highest tests).....	13.1
Cleveland's (average of two highest tests).....	13
Dominion's (average of three highest tests).....	12.7
Imperial (average of two highest tests).....	9.9
Magic (contains alum) (average of three highest tests).....	7.9

These tests should set the baking powder question at rest.—Montreal Pharmaceutical Journal.

To Pack Eggs For Long Keeping.

The yolk of the egg spoils much quicker than the white. For this reason it is important that the yolk should be surrounded with a layer of the white. If the egg is placed on the side or large end the heavy yolk will settle to the bottom and come in contact with the shell, which admits the air. If it is placed on the small end it will always have a layer of white between it and the shell. Eggs absorb odors easily, therefore only odorless materials should be used when packing them.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Artillerymen Were Once Regarded as Mechanics, Not Soldiers.

Until the time of Charles XII of Sweden the artillery was not considered a part of the army. The men serving in it were not soldiers, but regarded as mechanics. The officers had no army rank. Charles XII gave artillery officers a rank and regularly organized the artillery into companies. The battle of Poltava demonstrated the superiority of the gun in the hands of the Spanish infantry. The musket carried a two ounce ball and sometimes brought down at one fire two or three mailed knights. The French sent a flag of truce to remonstrate against the use of such barbarous weapons.

Alexander had four kinds of cavalry: the cataphract, or heavily armed horse; the light cavalry, carrying spears and very light armor; the acrobolist, or mounted archers, used for outpost, patrol and reconnoitering duty; and the dimachoe, or troops expected to act either as cavalry or infantry. Alexander the Great reorganized his father's army. The file or line of 16 men with the unit; two files made a diolochy; two diolochies made a tetralochy; two tetralochies a hexalochy; two of these a syntagma; 16 of these a small phalanx; four of these a tetra phalanx; or otherwise known as a large phalanx.

The Greeks attacked in a phalanx, the spears interlocked and shields overlapping. After the first onset the spears were dropped, and the day was decided with the sword. The cavalry attacked the enemy in the rear, if possible, and, in case of victory, undertook the pursuit.

Not the Conventional Woman.

"But I don't know you, madam," the bank cashier said to the woman who had presented a check.

"But this woman, instead of saying laughingly, 'I do not wish your acquaintance, sir,' merely replied, with an engaging smile:

"Oh, yes, you do, I think. I'm the redheaded old virgin next door to your whose 'secondarily little boys' are always reaching through the fence and picking your flowers. When you started down town this morning, your wife said: 'Now, Henry, if you want to have her fit to eat this evening, you'll have to leave me a little money. I can't run this house on the city water and ten cents a day.'"

"Here's your money, madam," said the cashier, pushing it toward her and coughing loudly.

"When small Bobby had worn his first pair of trousers for an hour, he went to his mother and begged to have on his kilt again. 'What for?' she asked. 'Because,' replied Bobby, 'I feel so lonesome in pants.'"

"A mother recently had occasion to leave her little 4 year old son alone at home while she made a brief call in the neighborhood. 'Did you get lonesome, dear?' she asked upon her return. 'Yes, mamma,' replied the little fellow. 'I felt just like a widower without you.'"

RUNAWAY'S STORY

Synopsis of an Interesting Discourse Delivered on Sunday in

THE KNOX PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

FROM PAUL, THE FUGITIVE AND HIS WRONG-DOING—THE PENITENT AND WHAT BECAME OF HIM.

His name was Onesimus, and his master was Philemon. The third character in the story is Paul, the apostle of Jesus Christ. All that is given to us of this incident in real life is contained in the letter which Paul wrote to Philemon concerning the runaway. Our interest in the story centres not alone in the facts, but also in the moral truths of religion which they illustrate. We follow them thus:

1. The fugitive and his wrong-doing. He had left the service of his master, and fled the country. The slave was his master's property; he was his by purchase or inheritance. By right of law the slave's service was under absolute control of his master. In this case, possessed by the desire for freedom, longing to be his own master, regarding his labor as degrading, or feeling his position intolerable, the slave watched his opportunity and unceremoniously took his leave.

Had any of us abandoned the service of God of Israel it was said, They forsake the Lord. Though under obligation to serve Jehovah, they took life into their own hands, and determined they would serve Him no longer. Has any one here been broad enough to have served the privations of impiety of righteous living; been chafing under the restraints of God's law been enmeshed of another man, unappreciated by the attractions of liberty, and so taken the bold step of turning his back upon Jehovah? See if this slave's act is not ours.

He committed a wrong before leaving. The leaving was wrong. We judge by certain language of Paul that he galloped. He took what did not belong to him, and soothed his conscience with the thought, "He can well spare it, and I have worked hard for it." "Return." Does that dead at our feet?

Have we either taken from or kept back what was due Him? "Ye can rich God." Yet ye have robbed me. Yet ye stay wherein have we robbed thee? In things and office.

for the foot of man. Not easy, not hard, but impossible for us to escape the penalty of wrong, to flee from the presence of God. "If I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall Thy hand lead me, and Thy right hand shall hold me." Nor distance, nor darkness can hide us from God. Is this recreant servant, this fugitive, slave, this wrong-doer with the law in pursuit, in any way representative? In him do we see the truth about our own misconduct?

2. A friend and his interposition. From Colossae in Asia Minor, having made his way as best he could, the wandering servant reached Rome, the eternal city, the heart of the world. What did he anticipate that city held for him when he first saw its towers and the roofs gilded in the sunshine? Probably he thought of a safe retreat, or an opening to fortune: everything but what happened occurred to his mind. He did not know that in this strange city was a singularly strange man, a prisoner, who would show to him the best offices of friendship. Onesimus, the slave, to his lasting good, comes into contact with Paul. Indeed no better fortune could have befallen him than to find a friend so true and faithful to his highest interests. "Happy the prodigals who meet such friends! Blessings upon the friends who help our prodigals!"

Paul counselled and taught. Onesimus, under the influence of this friend the slave became a new man. His darkest past in the true light, warned of the danger of wrong-doing, and taught concerning Christ, the erring one came to his right mind, and entered upon a new life. Teaching was followed by intercession, and Paul writes the letter that lies before us. Instead of informing the master of his slave's whereabouts, and surrendering him to justice, he gives the information and pleads for consideration. He put him into the hands of his erstwhile lord with a recommendation to mercy and a plea for restoration. The apostle, further, assumes responsibility for him. For this wrong that had been done, Philemon was to look to Paul, not to his guilty servant, "If he has wronged thee, or oweth thee ought, put that mine account. Paul hadn't anything himself, but he had an account against Philemon stated thus: "Albeit I do not say to thee how thou owest unto me even thine own self besides." Nevertheless, if it were demanded he would pay the debt of the wrong-doer. Thus his friendship rose in expression from counsel to responsibility for the wrong committed.

We, too, in our wandering and sin have had the good fortune to find a friend. Have you met Him? His name has been proclaimed everywhere. He is a Friend from heaven. All that Paul did for Onesimus, Christ for the foot of man. Not easy, not hard, but impossible for us to escape the penalty of wrong, to flee from the presence of God. "If I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall Thy hand lead me, and Thy right hand shall hold me." Nor distance, nor darkness can hide us from God. Is this recreant servant, this fugitive, slave, this wrong-doer with the law in pursuit, in any way representative? In him do we see the truth about our own misconduct?

...to him, and soothed conscience with the thought, "He will spare it, and I have worked hard for little return." Does that lie at our door? Have we either taken from God, or kept back what was due Him?
"Will man rob God?" Yet ye have robbed Him. Yet ye say wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings? Does this accusation stand against us? Keeping us "robbery as well as taking. Have we kept back anything from God, or what is the same, withheld good from them to whom it is due when it was in the power of our hand to do it?"

He was a fugitive from justice. His master was a Christian, and might be disposed to deal with the runaway with regard to mercy rather than justice. The Ray's demands were rigorous, and Onesimus might be "smitten with whips unto death." A sentence was hanging over him; and this the incident of freedom, the reward of obedience, the possible consequence of his change. See then if our liberty, when he broke God, or wrong Him, or kept away from Him is not doubly bought, so it there is not a penalty for sinful disobedience to wrongdoing. Is it not written in our nature, as well as in the Bible, "The soul that sineth it shall die." The wages of sin, is death?

But the penalty could be extended only when the slave was found. Though he was broken and brought back. He would have been hard then. It is not so now. The broken spark is still within.

sponsibility for the wrong committed.
We, too, in our wandering and sin have had the good fortune to find a Friend. Have you met Him? His name has been proclaimed everywhere. He is a Friend from heaven.
All that Paul did for Onesimus, Christ has done for us. He came and preached peace to men. In the glory of His risen life He stands before God's throne, to intercede for men. "He ever liveth to make intercession for us." And the great self-sacrificing act of His friendship was the giving of Himself over to death in our stead.
All our sins were laid to His account.
"He was made to be sin for us."

That we might be made the righteousness of God in Him. Well may we sing, "I've found a Friend; O, such a Friend." In this friendship of Christ lies all our hope. As the mind of this slave toward the apostle such let ours be towards Christ in unflinching trust, in hearty appreciation, in affectionate remembrance, and in loving return for good so far as time and talent and energy permit.

3. The penitent and what became of him. We are left to imagine the return of the slave, carrying with him this persuasive plea, the presentation to his master, and the happy consequence of forgiveness. We can sometimes imagine disappointment to Paul and to his client at the hands of Philemon.
We have no record of the issue. Reasoning from the facts, that Philemon himself had obtained mercy, that the slave was penitent and reformed, that Paul was his surety we may conclude that all was well, and that Onesimus took his place in the old home "not now as a servant, but as a brother beloved."

In the matter of our return to God we are not left to conjecture. The penitent's welcome and pardon are assured. God has mercy and abundant pardon. They who knock at mercy's gate shall find it swung open to admit them to favor and to peace. "The door of God's mercy is open. It is always open to all."

A woman of the highlands of Scotland lost her daughter. She traced her to the city, and brought her on her way home. A new temptation to the return journey was called the wayward child, and yielding, she once again forsook her mother's side. Home in deepest sorrow went the sad hearted mother to cast her burden upon the Lord. Time passed. Sitting in her cottage late one night, her head upon the table, she heard the floor creak, and lifted her eyes to see her daughter standing there. She had gently lifted the latch and walked in.
The greeting over, the child expressed her surprise that the door should

VITALIZES EVERY DROP OF BLOOD.

The majority of intelligent people know that rich, pure and highly vitalized blood alone can give health and build up the tissues that have been worn out. New and fresh blood carries all the materials for restoring wasted and worn-out parts of the body, and gives to the brain other materials for making nerve matter.
Paine's Celery Compound cleanses and purifies the blood and furnishes appropriate food for every part of the system. It increases the appetite, perfects digestion, gives nervous energy and increased strength.

If your blood is impure, if the skin has spots and eruptions, if you have an unhealthy pallor or yellow appearance, and if your eyes are showing yellowish whites, you should use Paine's Celery Compound without delay to cleanse the blood and regulate the liver and kidneys of the strain that is brought upon them whenever impure blood poisons through their substance.

Mr. M. D. Arthur, Chelmsford, Ont.,
writes as follows:

"I was laid up with scars all over my face and neck, the result of blood poisoning. While in that condition could not sleep at night, had no appetite, and could not attend to my work.
The doctors in my district and their medicines did not benefit me. My aunt advised me to use Paine's Celery Compound. In two weeks I was so much better that I could go out, and in three weeks I was able to work again.
I blessed the day I commenced with Paine's Celery."

MALCOLM KIRK.

A Tale of Moral Heroism
In Overcoming the World.

By CHARLES M. SHELTON,

Author of "In Fifth Steps," "Crucifixion of Philip Strong," "Robert, God's Seven Days."

[Copyright, 1906, by The Advance Publishing Co.]

"That was a good sermon you gave us, Mr. Kirk, last Sunday. It did us a world of good. We're praying for you at our house. God bless your work among us."

The man was gone, and Malcolm stood there holding the money, and it was impossible for him to prevent his mind from trying to guess by what self denial, hardship, sacrifice, that $10 had been saved. It was a little thing, but the meeting with his poor parishioner profoundly moved him.

He went on slowly and had almost reached the house when, as he turned a corner, he came face to face with the superintendent of his Sunday school. The superintendent was one of the leading temperance workers in Conrad.

He had been specially active in the week carried on in the country districts. He was one of Malcolm's best friends, one of the comparatively few men with whom he often counseled and one whom he trusted entirely.

"I've just been to the house, Mr. Kirk, to see you. I won't take your

"You won't give him up, will you?"
"I'm not now, but I failed to tell you that I was out at the Tucker district last night, and the men out there want you to come over tomorrow or next night if you can. They've never heard you. I'm sure you could do some real good work there. It's needed bad enough. The neighborhood is made up of young ranchmen who don't all drink. It was inexhaustible. Her great beauty, spirit unaltered by her suffering, had wonderful influence. Many a young ranchman went away from those prayer meetings, vowing to vote for the amendment. The saloon men would come to the doors of their places and eye the groups of kneeling mothers and wives in sullen amazement. They had cause to fear for their unhappy cattle when the women of the state were thus on their knees, calling on God and heaven to help the cause of "home and native land."

The afternoon of that election day Malcolm was suddenly called out to "The Forks" to see Philip Barton. He had been steadily failing during those two years, and Mrs. Barton sent for Kirk in haste, and he went, supposing it might be for the last time.

It was after dark before he came back to Conrad. Philip Barton had died that afternoon, unconscious at last of the prayer that Malcolm had offered by the side of his heartbroken mother.

"God of mercy," cried Malcolm as he entered the street that night, "grace that this day's work in our state has killed the power of this enemy that has killed this boy and broken this mother's life!"

The election was over, but no one could predict the result. As Malcolm came up the street it was crowded with men and women. The Christian Temperance union had been at work all day. It had served a free lunch to all the voters and now was holding a prayer meeting in front of Valmer's place.

The crowd filled the wide street and overflowed the broad sidewalks. Free whisky had flowed all day. The crowd was full of men who had been drinking, and they were now in a condition to quarrel.

Dorothy was kneeling in the center of the women. Malcolm forced his way to the edge of the sidewalk in front of the saloon. He had never loved his wife as he loved her now. Her face was glorified by the Spirit's work within. He was conscious of an unusual disturbance behind him, coming from the saloon. There were shouts and oaths and a pistol shot. But still he continued to gaze at Dorothy, who as calmly as if in her own room kneeled there while the confusion in front of the saloon increased. And never again in all his life will Malcolm Kirk feel the satanic venom he felt that night in the ruin power, which on that eventful day faced the prayers and the homes of the women of Kansas.

CHAPTER XXII.

TWENTY YEARS AFTER.

Nearly 20 years had gone by since that night of the election, when Dorothy had knelt in front of Valmer's saloon. In the main street of Conrad, when one evening a well-dressed, distinguished looking gentleman stepped out of the west bound express upon the platform.

"Does Mr. Kirk live here where he used to?" he asked of one of the loungers at the station.

"Yes; he lives up by the church," was the answer.

The stranger went on down the main street, looking about him curiously, and finally stopped in front of a comfortable looking house close by a road

"All right. Oh, by the way, Mr. Kirk"—the superintendent had started on, but he turned around and came back a step—"it may encourage you a little to hear what I overheard in front of Valmer's place the other day! Valmer was out in front of his saloon, and he said to one of his customers: 'I don't care for all the other prohibition cranks in Conrad except that preacher Kirk. He has a way of getting his church members to believe as he does, and if they begin to vote that way—I didn't hear any more, but that bit of a speech ought to be encouraging. We will never give up this fight, will we, Mr. Kirk?'"

"No; we will never give it up," replied Malcolm, with the same feeling at heart that he had when he said to Mrs. Barton, "No; I will never give him [Philip] up."

He walked slowly, and Dorothy knew the moment he entered the room that something unusual had happened. Malcolm could never conceal his emotions.

He took out the letter that Carver had given back to him and held it out to Dorothy.

"It has not been mailed, I doubt if it ever ought to be," he said simply, but his face was pale, and his lip quivered under his intense excitement, for he was stirred deeply by the events of the day.

"What does it mean?" Dorothy asked as she took the letter, looking at Malcolm and letting the letter fall from her hand upon the table near which she had been sitting.

"It means—I think—yes, I am sure it means that I must stay here. Neither my heart nor my mind has any real joy in the thought of leaving my work here, Dorothy, I cannot leave without seeming to myself, to my church, to the citizens, to all my friends here, to be guilty of running away from my duty because of hardship. I cannot persuade myself that the Lord wants me to preach with my pen. I know as well as if he spoke to me with an audible voice that he wants me to speak to living men in close contact with them, to bear their burdens near by, to be one of the multitude in the struggle for a better world. Especially I do not dare to silence the conviction within me that I ought to stay by the temperance fight in Kansas just now. The Lord has seen fit to use me to his glory in this great crisis for the cause of home and native land, Dorothy, if I were only rich! If I only had the means to give you what you ought to have!"

The last two sentences were suddenly wrung from him as he sat there, watching Dorothy, who had listened in silence, her hands clasped in her lap and her face, Malcolm found, cold and hard.

For the first and last time in his life he was deceived in Dorothy.

She suddenly lifted her head and smiled, while her eyes filled with tears. "Do you think, do you think, Malcolm, that I could ever be proud of you again, ever feel satisfied if you acted a part that was not true to your convictions? Do you think I married you for your money?"

"I always knew you never married me for my good looks," replied Malcolm because they were building his ship together.

At the first church meeting held after that eventful night and day in Malcolm's and Dorothy's lives Malcolm boldly called on his members to rally around the building of a new church.

He read the two letters, the one from the superintendent and the other from the church building society. The members listened in silence. Malcolm looked into their faces quietly. They were gathered in the little storeroom in the main street. Next door was a saloon, and that Sunday, as on many others, the congregation could hear the clinking of glasses and the drunken laughter of the men at the bar.

"We might as well accept the facts," said Malcolm, and as he talked it is certain that the Holy Spirit was present in that little room in wonderful power, as he always is after temptation and an overcoming. "We shall have to build this church without outside help. You know what my views are about raising money by means of fairs and suppers. I think the Lord will show us a better way. We are all poor together. I do not need to say that I am willing to share this struggle with you. We are not only going to build a house of wood in which to worship, but a church of Jesus which has for its habitation the throne of a human soul. This saloon!"

Malcolm paused, and in the silence every one could hear through the thin wall the noise in the other room—"this saloon" represents a destructive force that we as a church must, by God's grace, overcome. How much do we value the church? Are we ready to sacrifice, to go without some necessities even, to build up the kingdom and destroy the works of the devil? If we are, we can overcome. We can build our church and grow into a power. Let us believe in the power of the Spirit and go on in his might."

"I propose three cheers," are, we can overcome. We can build our church and grow into a power. Let us believe in the power of the Spirit and go on in his might."

During the weeks and months that followed Malcolm had great encouragement in his plans for building. He boldly went to several of the business men. He had been called out of town on the afternoon of that day to see a young man who had died of the effects of a drunken debauch, and as he came back to Conrad in the evening his wife was kneeling in the center of a group of other women, holding a prayer meeting in front of one of the most notorious saloons then in Conrad.

"He had only just come to the place when a great disturbance broke out in the saloon behind him. Some one broke through the crowd and attempted to throw a bottle of vitriol at Mrs. Kirk. It was afterward shown that the man was crazy with drink and awfully excited by the events of the day. He was only partly successful in his horrible attempt. Mrs. Kirk's face was burned on one side, but a man of the name of Carver, who had been drinking, but was sober enough to realize what was going on, grappled with the other and took away the bottle, receiving dreadful burns in doing so. This man is now the sexton in Mr. Kirk's church, a devout, sincere Christian and a good example, so Kirk says, of hundreds of men who will remain sober if the saloon is taken away and the constant temptation to drink is absent. And so far as I can observe he is decidedly right in his belief."

"Well, Mrs. Kirk has recovered from those injuries, and her beauty of face, which is still remarkable, is marred only by a scar which gives her, to all who know her history, an added interest. The affair created an intense feeling here for a long time. Nothing so terrible had been known since that attempt to disgrace Mrs. Coleman of Marville, Canada, while marching with other women in a temperance procession. The event opened many people's eyes to the satanic power of the drink evil. It was only one out of countless events where the whisky element has stood for the greatest crimes and for which it must answer heavily at the judgment bar of a long suffering God."

"It is difficult for me to write of Malcolm Kirk without seeming to exaggerate and overemphasize his work. I want to speak of his beautiful family, which is a part of the best part of this western town."

"Mrs. Kirk has developed into a woman of rare power in all the church and social life of the place. Years ago the women here recognized her ability as a leader by making her president of the Christian Temperance union. It was largely through her efforts that the township polled a very heavy vote for the amendment. She has thrown all her rare talents as a gifted musician also into the redemption of the town, with the result that no woman has such an influence as she has on all the young, thoughtless life that has crowded in here during the town's rapid growth in the years of eighty-six and seven."

There are three children, two boys, named Gilbert and Herman, and a girl, the oldest child, named Faith. The boys are bright, handsome fellows and take after the mother. Gilbert is 17 and Herman 15. Faith, who is nearly 19, is like her father. I have not yet been able to tell whether she is what you women would call 'pretty' or not, but she is one of the most interesting individual girls I ever met. She is personage in one sense the very smallest thing that Kirk has done. It is not too much to say that he and his wife have revolutionized the moral life of this whole town. When they came here about 20 years ago, they found a community of 1,500 people. A great amount of lawless, thoughtless life crowded the saloons, the dance-houses, the cheap resorts of amusement. Kirk and his wife, after passing through an experience of great suffering and temptation, most of which has always been unknown even to their own people, came out of their affliction with astonishing power over the life of the place. There is no question that the very thinking of the people here is shaped by Malcolm Kirk's Christianity. The promise he and his wife made when they came here has been constantly in mind. The number of lost men and boys who have been attracted to Kirk's ministry and to Mrs. Kirk's singing and playing and led to Christ is amazing. Even the business and political life of the town has been shaped by Kirk's purpose in life. That means a great deal, as any one will acknowledge. This fact, however, is shown by the common allusions to Conrad by other towns. They speak of it as 'Kirkville.' A higher compliment to a man's influence it would be difficult to find."

"It is of course still true that the devil does business in Conrad. Kirk has told me that the whisky men have never ceased from the day they were driven out of Conrad to attempt to come back to some form and carry on their work. At the present time he tells me that through failure on the part of the officers of the law to enforce the law the whisky men have grown bold and opened several places. He is right now in the midst of the old struggle again. This time it is a struggle with state and county officials who have broken their oaths of office. It is the same struggle in another form. At the bottom of the whisky business in any state, whether it has a prohibitory statute or not, is the incentive of great financial returns for a very little real labor and also the human passion for drink, two things which Kirk says must be recognized by all temperance people and always reckoned upon in the problem of their cure."

FADING AWAY.

THE CONDITION OF YOUNG GIRLS WHO ARE ANAEMIC.

This Record is of Especial Value to Parents. It is a Message From a Mother to Mothers of Crowing Girls.

Among the young girls throughout Canada whose good health—perhaps life itself—to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, Miss Hattie Albright, of Camden, Ont. When a representative called at the Albright home to make enquiries as to the particulars of the cure, she was cordially received by Mrs. Albright.

was out at the Parker district last night, and the men out there want you to come over tomorrow or next night if you can. They've never heard you. I'm sure you could do some real good work there. It's needed bad enough. The neighborhood is made up of young ranchmen who nearly all drink. If you can go, I can send word by one of the men who are driving out there this afternoon."

"Tell him I'll go tomorrow," said Malcom in a low voice.

WOMEN WILL TALK.

Can't Blame them for Telling each other about Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR WEAK, NERVOUS WOMEN.

It's only natural that when a woman finds a remedy which cures her of nervousness and weakness, relieves her pains and aches, puts color in her cheek and vitality in her whole system, she should be anxious to let her suffering sisters know of it.

Mrs. Hannah Holmes, St. James Street, 3, John, N.B., relates her experience with this remedy as follows:—"For some years I have been troubled with fluttering of the heart and dizziness, accompanied by a smothering feeling which prevented me from resting. My appetite was poor and I was much run down and debilitated."

"Since I started using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, the smothering feeling has gone, my heart beat is now regular, the fluttering has disappeared, and I have been wonderfully built up through the tonic effect of the pills. I now feel stronger and better than for many years, and cannot say too much in praise of the remedy which restored my long lost health."

Wood's Phospholine is sold in Rat Portage by E. Wood, J. Warner, J. Johnson and W. S. Druggists.

"Yes, he lives up by the church," was the answer.
The stranger went on down the main street, looking about him curiously, and finally stopped in front of a comfortable looking house close by a good sized church building.

He went up the short board walk and rang the bell.
The door was opened by a girl about 15 years of age, a girl with a great profusion of heavy brown hair and a face that people had to look at twice before they knew whether she was what is generally called "pretty" or not.

"Is your father at home?" asked the gentleman, smiling.

"I don't know. Will you come in? That is, unless you have something to sell. And then I am sure father is out." She said it without the least appearance of being pert or rude.

"I haven't anything to sell," replied the stranger, laughing. "I am George Wilson, one of your father's old classmates in Hermon, and he—"

"Come right in," said the girl. "Any one from Hermon is welcome. I've heard father speak of you often."

"This is Faith, is it?" he asked as he entered a pleasant sitting room.

"Yes, sir," she answered shyly. "Excuse me, I'll call father."

She went out of the room, and the Rev. George Wilson of the famous Unitarian church of Boston looked around him, and his look was full of the most absorbing interest.

What he felt and thought can perhaps best be told in a letter which he wrote home two days afterward while sitting in the guest chamber of the parsonage. The letter threw much light on the events of the past 29 years and is of value as coming from one who saw Malcom Kirk and his family at this time, both as a friend and also as an intensely interested spectator of a very remarkable life.

"I am sitting in Malcom Kirk's house," the letter began, "and it is difficult for me to realize all that that fact means. There is no question in my mind that Kirk is in some ways one of the most remarkable ministers in this country, and yet he and his talented wife have remained in this comparatively obscure place for over 29 years, working quietly and without ostentation, with some most astonishing results until lately unheard of by the churches in the east."

"Since I was in Conrad about 20 years ago great changes have occurred in the state. Perhaps the greatest change of all has been the prohibitory amendment to the constitution. Every one knows that the election on the legislature's act to submit the amendment resulted in an affirmative vote. Every one also knows that the people have never reversed that decision, and it seems probable that they never will."

"You will also remember what an excitement was caused by one event in Conrad at the close of that famous election day. I listened to the story from Kirk's own lips, and it was as exciting as any novel I ever read."

"I always knew you never married me for 'my good looks,'" replied Malcom, with a smile that revealed inward joy, "and you certainly did not marry me for my money, for I told you at the time that I hadn't any. But, oh, Dorothy, you know how I long to do and be everything to you, don't you?"

"Yes, I know it very well," Dorothy answered. She had come over to her husband and the anxious look on his face had given way to one of relief.
She had the letter to the Boston editor in her hand. Malcom took it from her.

"If we are not going to mail this, what do you think we ought to do with it?" he asked, looking at the stove significantly.

"Save the stamp, Malcom," said Dorothy. "You may need it if we are not going to live in Boston."

He tore off the corner of the envelope where the stamp was and opened the stove door and threw the letter into the fire.

"So that settles it," said Malcom gravely. There was a pause in the little room. "I feel better," he added, looking steadily at his wife.

"Do you?" said Dorothy gently. She kissed him, and they both seemed to remember their promise made in the little church. Dorothy knew well enough that for a man like Malcom to do anything that in the smallest degree contradicted his convictions meant for him continual torture of mind. The minute she saw that his action in leaving Conrad meant that sort of moral conflict she knew there was only one course open to them, and that was to stay in Conrad and battle out the life that duty called them to live there.

In all this nothing but the great and trustful love they felt for each other made possible such a complete and unquestioning change of plans that affected their whole future. Malcom would not have been the man he was if he had not felt constrained to stay in Conrad. Dorothy would not have been the woman she was if, once seeing that her husband's moral strength depended on this decision, she had attempted to argue him out of it or had failed to accept the situation cheerfully and once for all.

So, then, these two children of the All Father, having settled this simply but decidedly this question, faced the life before them bravely and silently, and no one in Conrad knew until years afterward how near they had come to losing two of the greatest souls that ever came into the place. Malcom never told his church people. He simply picked up the thread of his affection for them where he had seemed for a while to drop it and went on to love them more and more, and they, in turn, never dreaming of the moral conflict he had been having, grew to and church and grow into a power. Let us believe in the power of the Spirit and go on in his might."

During the weeks and months that followed Malcom had great encouragement in his plans for building. He boldly went to several of the business men in Conrad—men who were not church members—and asked them to help. They did so and in many cases came to him before he went to them and volunteered assistance. The spirit of prayer pervaded the entire church. Before spring almost enough money had been raised to build a larger structure than the one that had been burned.

Before that time, however, the temperance agitation had grown into a great tide of feeling in Conrad. Dorothy never forgot the evening Malcom came in and with a glow in his face that transformed it exclaimed:

"A telegram just received says the legislature today by the necessary two-thirds vote passed the resolution to submit a prohibitory amendment to the constitution! I never cheered for the legislature before, but I propose three cheers, three times three, right away!"

Out on the main street that night the temperance people built an immense bonfire. The band came out and played, and there were speeches and temperance songs. One of the best speeches was by Malcom Kirk. He called attention during it to the fact that the battle had only just begun; that there were nearly two years yet before the people would be called on to vote on the amendment. All the time he was speaking he was conscious that outside the enthusiastic circle of temperance and Christian people was the whisky element, sullen, angry, surprised at the action of the legislature, venomous, just beginning to stir itself for the two years' struggle. It seemed to Malcom that he could even that night prophesy in some degree the satanic character of the conflict that made Conrad one of the fiercest centers of the fight.

But he was right in saying that the battle had only just begun by the act of the legislature. The weeks and months that followed witnessed some wonderful scenes in Conrad. Now the women of Conrad began to show their power, as they had already been a constant influence for years.

Dorothy suddenly assumed a place she once would never have dared to take. The women in all the other churches, recognizing her ability, came to her and insisted that she take the presidency of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, that had been organized a short time before. She did so at first with fear and trembling, then with a brave, joyous confidence that amazed her and her husband, but the Lord was leading her.

The time passed, and the election day drew near. Night after night before that eventful day when the people of the state were to vote on the question of saloon or no saloon in their commonwealth the women's union held street prayer meetings in front of the saloons. Dorothy worked and prayed take after the mother. Gilbert is 17 and Hermon 15. Faith, who is nearly 19, is like her father. I have not yet been able to tell whether she is what you women would call 'pretty' or not, but she is one of the most interesting individual girls I ever met. She is fond of trying experiments and resembles her father in that respect. She wants to know and feel things for herself and is passionately fond of doing for other people. I begin to get the impression that she is thoroughly unselfish and that she has the making of a remarkably useful woman. But I predict for her some trying experiences. She is one of those girls who would make her father and mother anxious for her future if it were not for the fact that they and herself are Christian in their whole nature. That is the salvation of such a girl as Faith, and Mr. and Mrs. Kirk seem to be peacefully sure of the fact. All of the children are members of the church, and all three of them are very evidently proud of their father and of what he has done.

"Come right in," said the girl. "Any one from Hermon is welcome."

"You ask, What has Malcom Kirk done?"

"In the first place, in spite of what seemed like impossibilities, he succeeded years ago in building a church and parsonage, both of which had been burned down, it is supposed, by the whisky men during the fight, which went on before the amendment was carried. The church is a comfortable structure, seating 300 or 400 people, with several classrooms attached. The parsonage is a good house of eight rooms, fairly well furnished, although Kirk's peculiar habits of generosity have not permitted anything approaching luxury even in the slightest degree. But the building of the church and

Among the young girls throughout Canada who owe good health—perhaps life itself—to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, is Miss Hattie Althouse, of Camden, Ont. When a representative called at the Althouse home to make inquiries as to the particulars of the cure, he was cordially received by Mrs. Althouse, who readily consented to give a statement for publication. "Up to the age of fourteen years," said Mrs. Althouse, "my daughter Hattie had always enjoyed the best of health. Then she began to complain of weakness and grew pale and languid. We tried several medicines, but instead of helping her she was steadily growing worse, and we became alarmed and called in a doctor. He told us that her blood was in a very watery condition, and that she was on the verge of nervous prostration. She was under his care for several months, but still kept growing worse. She had become very pale, had no appetite, frequent headaches, and after even slight exertion her heart would palpitate violently. As time passed, she seemed to grow worse and worse, until at last she could scarcely move about, and would lie upon a sofa most of the day. At this juncture she had occasional fainting fits, and any fright, as from a sudden noise, would bring on slight attacks of hysteria."

Both my husband and myself feared that she would not live more than a few months. It was while Hattie was in this condition that I read an account of a girl cured of a similar ailment through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Then I decided that Hattie should give them a trial, and prepared three boxes; when she had used them there was an undoubted improvement in her condition, and we felt hopeful that she would regain her health. She continued using the pills, and from that on daily made progress toward complete recovery. Her appetite returned; color began to come back to her face, headaches disappeared, and in the course of a few months she was as well as ever she had been in her life. It is now more than two years since she discontinued the use of the pills, and in all that time has enjoyed the best of health, with absolutely no return of the trouble. I can testify how grateful we feel for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for my daughter, and I would strongly urge mothers whose daughters may be ailing to give them Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at once, and not experiment with other medicines."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills create new blood, and thus reach the root of the disease. In the case of girls merging into womanhood they are almost indispensable, and their use is a guarantee of future health and strength. Other so-called tonic pills are mere imitations of this medicine and should be avoided. If your doctor does not keep them they will be sent, postpaid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Winnipeg Free Press: A pleasing break in the routine of office work occurred in the business department of the Free Press on Saturday when the employees assembled to take leave of Miss L. Campbell, one of the stenographers who has severed her connection with the paper. J. H. Dumas, on behalf of the employees, presented Miss Campbell with a sterling silver monogram dressing case, accompanying the presentation with a few well-chosen remarks, expressing the regret felt by all in the ending of the pleasant relationship which had existed between herself and the entire staff. Miss Campbell leaves the Free Press employ in order to fill a still more pleasant position, and will in the near future take up her residence in Rat Portage. The best wishes of all her former office companions go with her.
